From The London Spectator.

From The London Speciator.

A correspondent, who should have his subject it anybody alive known it includes all we saids a forting of the provides and the parties that the parties of the great singers, and the parties of the great singers, and the parties of the great instrumentalists are so different from their rivals. The wear as our more strumentalists, he latinates—from their rivals. The wear as our more strumentalists, he latinates—from their rivals. The wear as our more strumentalists, he latinates—from their struments with the property of the parties of the property of the property of the property of the parties of the singers is the cause of the difference, for the instruments is any of the parties of the singers is the cause of the difference, for the instruments with the parties of the singers is the cause of the difference, for the instruments with the parties of the singers is the cause of the difference, for the instruments with the parties of the parties of the singers is the cause of the difference, for the instruments with the parties of the singers is the cause of the difference, for the instruments with the parties of the par deep, all drawn to him or her by something internal, involuntary and incommunicable. Talk of genius; what is it in intoxicating power to the possession of a gift like this, unique, it may be, through all the singing houses of the world? No wonder its possessor remains, till it departs, an enjoying, unresirained, almost irresponsible, and sometimes very naughty child. The instrumentalist has neither this joy nor this temptation. He, too, has als "glit," the something magical which learning cannot yield, or labor produce; but it is not a given gift. He has to pay a price, usually a full price, for its development; and when, by stiemnous toil, it is developed, it produces neither the same rain of gold nor the same passion of adoration. Joachim is admired where Mario is worshipped; and even to Joachim, supreme in his art, the necessity of the effort which trains the mind as well as the fingers never can end. Did Mario, who gave away a fortune rather than say "No!" ever make an effort in his life?

The immigration into the United States in September was 39,I17 persons, against 48,443 in September, 1887, and 39,917 in September, 1886. The total immigration for the nine months ended September 30, 1888, was 432,802, against 411,282 for 1887, and 294.596 for 1886.

THE TREASURY CHANGES SMALL THE TREASURY CHANGES SMALL.

The United States Treasurer last week received from customs $3,712,455, and from internal revenue $2,579,598; total from both $6,292,053, against $6,485,801 for the preceding week. Yesterday's Treasury statement shows a loss to its net cash balances of $909,793, but it was principally made up by a reduction of $690,436 in its bank deposits. A gain to the gold balance of $2,608,482 is more than offset by losses of silver and a reduction in the amount of National bank notes on hand, so that the net loss to the balances and a reduction in the amount of National bank notes on hand, so that the net loss to the balances in Treasury vaults was only $219,357; adding to this loss the usual amount ($600,009) weekly silver coinage, gives $819,000 for the amount actually withdrawn from the Treasury vaults during the week, and makes the amount of legal money restored to the general circulation during the last four weeks about $24,000,000. The amount of bonds deposited last week to secure National bank circulation was $63,750 greater than the amount withdrawn from deposit. The amount of bonds held to secure Government deposits of cash in National banks was reduced $790,000, and the bonds so withdrawn probably were sold to the Government.
